IAKS Canada invites to a facility tour

IAKS Canada continues its facility tour series with the opportunity to experience two brand new, award winning recreation facilities in the Greater Vancouver area.

The SFU Stadium at Terry Fox Field was designed to create a new type of public space on campus. On event days, it is a performance venue that supports a range of viewing experiences, including formal seating for those who want to focus on the game and areas for socializing for those who like to mingle. Outside of event days, it becomes a south-facing outdoor seating area to view athletic or cultural events that supports building community on campus.

təmasew̓tx™ Aquatic and Community Center is New Westminister's new civic home. Replacing two aging existing facilities, it is Canada's first all electric pool and the first constructed aquatic centre to achieve the Zero-Carbon Building Standard. The project breaks new ground in environmental and inclusive design, incorporating a number of new technologies and design strategies from European precedents.

Join us as we hear from the operators and designers of these innovative projects. Participants will hear operational perspectives, learn about key design issues and get a behind the scenes look.
